To Whom It May Concern:

I am pleased to be able to write this letter of recommendation for Andrew Androstic, who is applying for a teaching position within your district.

Andy continuously looks for new ways to create engaging lessons for his students. He is always willing to try new strategies that provide opportunities for students to maximize their creativity and critical thinking skills. He constantly encourages his students to think analytically and apply problem-solving skills, especially for the completion of assignments and projects. His lessons are appropriately scaffolded, yet rigorous enough to be challenging to his students.

Andy is a leader among the faculty. He can always be counted on to attend and participate in trainings and conferences. More importantly, he enthusiastically utilizes what he learns and applies it to improve instruction. Most recently, Andy volunteered to become part of the Train the Trainer program for the Canvas LMS at Crawford Central School District. Two summers ago, he attended the Model Schools Conference in Orlando, FL. During the course of the conference, he was actively planning on ways to incorporate what was being shared by the presenters. Because of Andy's dedication and being a constant learner, his students reap the benefits of having a teacher that makes learning fun, engaging, and effective.

As a colleague, Andy is truly a professional who is devoted to teaching. He is receptive to professional development, works well with other staff, and has a strong desire to improve his craft. It would truly be a loss to our district, and a gain to yours, but I wouldn't hesitate to recommend Andy for a teaching position within your district.

Respectfully,

Stacey Walsh
